Content created by the President's World of Sports, Fitness & NutritionExec last reviewed February 28, 2018 Picture: Youtube How well do you remember music videos from the 1980s? Take this quiz to find out.80s videos were all about the MTV era. The funny thing is, it wasn't expected that music videos would become big business. Little did record labels and cameramen know when that first music video hit the small screen at the tail in late 1979 that music videos would become one of the primary ways for music to be marketed over the next few decades. In fact, music videos have become so big that they remain one of the primary ways for music artists to reach their audiences. And, of course, now they come with their own industry and rewards. In the beginning, music videos were low-budget productions designed to expose the artist themselves. Most of the early music videos were little more than a cameraman standing there singing. But as audiences began to respond to them, the videos became big-budget productions. One of the most famous of these is Michael Jackson's Thriller video. Thriller is a 14-minute music video that came complete with outflow and script. The video was directed by John Landis, who was seen directing the films Of National Lampoon's Animal House and The Blues Brothers. Thriller holds the Guinness World Record, as it was the most successful music video ever. You think you can stick to this music video quiz? Let's get to the start. Borderline was filmed on location in Los Angeles, California, and was the first video madonna made with director Mary Lambert, who later directed the videos Like a Virgin, Material Girl, La isla Bonita, and Like a Prayer. The portrait of street life and the high fashion scene in the video was a reference to Madonna's life in the truncated, multiracial streets and clubs she used to haunt as her career began, as well as the world of popularity and success she was experiencing at the moment. With the help of MTV, which gave the video plenty of air time, Burning Down the House became The Talking Heads' biggest hit. He didn't get much radio play at that time, but he passed it as a classic from the 80s and is widely used in movies and TV shows including Gilmore Girls, 13 Going on 30, Six Feet Under, Revenge of the Nerd, and Someone Like You. The video for Rapture made its U.S. television debut on January 31, 1991, and became the first rap video to be broadcast on MTV. Part of the video is a scene of Debbie Harry dancing down the street, past graffiti artists, Uncle Sam, an American Indian and a goat. YouTube Music videos are fun to watch for a multitude of reasons, but if you ask us, we like to watch them for design inspiration. Below, House Beautiful has rounded up a list of music videos that show some of the best homes we've ever seen. Whether you're interested in castles, mansions or châteaux, our list has something for everyone, including homes that have acted as hinterland as Taylor Swift, Drake, the Jonas brothers and Lana Del Rey. As the saying goes, there is no place like home – and we really want three clicks of sparkly, red shoes to be the only one They're not going to take us to these video homes now. Ad - Continue Reading Below Taylor Swift, Blank Space There's a reason why Taylor Swift's music video for Blank Space has more than 2.5 billion views - his visual recordings are wonderfully over the top and opulent in a way that perfectly matches Swift's stunning lyrics. This award-winning music video was shot primarily at Oheka Castle, the second-largest home in the United States, built for financier and philanthropist Otto Hermann Kahn, designed by Delano & Aldrich in 1919 with the Olmsted Brothers Gardens (sons of Frederick Law Olmsted of Central Hall of Fame). Oheka is now the venue for weddings and events (and hotels) where celebrities such as Kevin Jonas (who is also on this list) have been married. If we ever get a chance to visit Oheko, we promise not to throw the decor into the fireplace, stab fully painted portraits into the ruins and have a relentless, mascara-like destruction in front of a marble fireplace. Watch Drake's video, Drake's Toosie Slide very own Toronto mansion takes center stage in his video for Toosie Slide, and now we know why he's constantly singing just wait, going home in one of his other hit songs – we'd also hit home if ours looked like that. If you are looking for more inspiration for drake-related design after watching this video, his house will also be featured on the cover of the AD issue in May 2020. Watch the Jonas Brothers video, Sucker If you're making your first music video years after the breakup of a successful band of brothers, the trick is supposed to be done by a 75,000-square-foot house more than 400 years old. Sucker's music video begins with the creation of a recording of the remarkable exterior of Hatfield House, a Jacobean estate just outside London. We think it's safe to say that this house is the main attraction of this Jonas Brothers music video. We, too, would parade around the historic English country house in a suit with a corgis suit. à la Queen Elizabeth II WATCH THE VIDEO Bazzi, Myself You might have heard Bazzi's song Myself in various Tik Tok videos in recent months, given that it's gone viral two years after being released, but we would much rather watch the accompanying music video for its very showy French-inspired furniture (and chic the puldes that sit on furniture), baroque mirrors and detailed mold. As far as the exteroLOGY of this home is concerned, it boasts timeless elements such as Corinthian columns, arched windows and a Mediterranean-style roof consisting of clay tiles. In the words of Bazzi, I think I'm losing my mind, above this house and its sworn design. Watch the video of Iggy Azalea, the Los Angeles mansion that is presented in Iggy Azalea's Started is quite a subought of architecture and interior design, with its entrance of the forked iron and fence, intricate white mold crown, and damascus wallpaper. Not to mention this "fancy" home comes with a dreamy view of the lush landscapes that California is famous for. And as Iggy Azalea sings in this song, her house is so big, [she] sits on acres and acres, [she] has never seen [her] neighbors. We wish we could be in this context, but we'll just have to live vicariously through this video for now. Watch the video of Lana Del Rey, Born to Die Château de Fontainebleau, located in France, is arguably the most spectacular home on this list given the cathedral's esqne grandeur, and Lana Del Rey's inclusion of live tigers, her signature flower crown, and an enchanted throne-like chair really match her vision. In this important part of Renaissance architecture (UNESCO World Heritage Site), there were many French monarchs, including Napoleon III, nephew of Napoleon Bonaparte. There is one thing we certainly know - we will not have any "summer grief" if this chateau is in our sights.
